Why GRADUATE STUDIES in SOCIOLOGY?

In general, a sociological approach engages with contemporary social problems and questions from a critical perspective. Students of sociology are trained to critically examine social dynamics and structures, and to engage with the formation of pathways towards social change. Our students at the MA level are trained (theoretically and methodologically) in advanced critical social analysis. Both micro and macro sociological approaches are covered.

The Sociology graduate program at Queen’s has particular strengths in socio-legal studies and criminology, critical sociology, and surveillance and digital media. Most of our graduates from the MA program proceed to doctoral programs throughout Canada and beyond. Others move into law, social work, or take up employment in policy analysis and research. Many graduates of the MA program remark on the intimate, supportive and cohesive culture of the Department.

Why QUEEN’S?

In addition to the benefits of a small department where students receive ample attention from faculty and staff, inside the classroom and out, Sociology at Queen’s offers an annual graduate student conference where MA students who are interested may engage in a typical conference format with many members of faculty and from the graduate program in attendance.

The Surveillance Studies Centre is a multi-disciplinary and international research centre affiliated with the Department. It offers several speakers series that have attracted leading figures in surveillance, including Edward Snowden. Its current streams include big data surveillance, drones, wearables, and social sorting.

Queen’s is located in Kingston, which offers meaningful points of social and political engagement. Because of the significance Kingston holds in the federal penal system, there are many local associations concerned with prison transitions and reform. Some of our graduates work with the Elizabeth Frye Society, while others work within local prisons. There is a large and growing Boys and Girls club where members of the Queen’s community interact on a regular basis. Some of our graduate students work with local shelters for women, and in feminist legal studies in Law at Queen’s.

“What makes the MA program different, perhaps unique, is the people who inhabit it. The Queen’s Sociology department is full of people who are not only willing, but eager to help you reach your full potential. With small class sizes, students are encouraged to collaborate with their peers as well as supportive professors. Queen’s Sociology is an educational community that I am very proud to be part of.”

– Jennifer Whitaker, MA Candidate
